Writing in the Arts & Humanities

Prepares students for professional and public careers in the Arts and Humanities by emphasizing reading and writing arguments and the kinds of writing needed in further study and executive positions: summaries, analyses, proposals, research notes, reports, and reviews. Includes collaborative projects, electronic writing, instruction in revision and editing, and exploratory writing to discover ideas.

Fulfills Upper Division Communication/Writing (CW)

Students strongly advised to take WRTG 2010 or equivalent prior to this course.
